

Lindsay Rodgers, MA, RDN

Lindsay Rodgers serves as an administrator for the Texas Department of Agriculture's (TDA) Food and Nutrition Division. She oversees the division's compliance section, including policy, training and monitoring for the 12 federal nutrition programs administered by the agency. Lindsay has dedicated her career to public service with more than 18 years of experience working in state government in Texas. She previously served as the Texas director of the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants and Children (WIC), a U.S. Department of Agriculture program providing healthy food, nutrition education, and breastfeeding support to 800,000 mothers and young children in Texas each month. Lindsay also served as an associate commissioner at the Health and Human Services Commission, overseeing WIC, early childhood intervention services, and diverse safety net health programs. From 2010 to 2013, Lindsay served as the deputy assistant commissioner for TDA's Food and Nutrition Division, and she is thrilled to be back home at TDA.

Lindsay is a registered dietitian and holds a Bachelor of Arts in Dance and a Master of Arts in Health Education from the University of Texas. She lives in Austin with her husband, two teenage daughters, and their basset hound mix.